The Mountain Peak

This is an informal presentation of student interests and activities compiled and written by the senior class. We have stressed our interests in pictures because we feel that only through our interests will we be able to scale the educational mountain which is ever before us.

We proudly dedicate this book to our classmates who are now in the armed forces and bid them God speed when they will be coming home again.

In Memoriam

Mrs. H. C. Butler
Mrs. A. P. Martin
Mrs. E. E. Anderson

As we turn the pages of our yearbook, we think of the present, past, and future. The present is too much with us to be adequately set down — the future is a hope not yet attained — the past recalls those things, episodes and people who have so enriched our lives that we shall ever pay tribute to their memory.

Drama is the true art - for drama is life

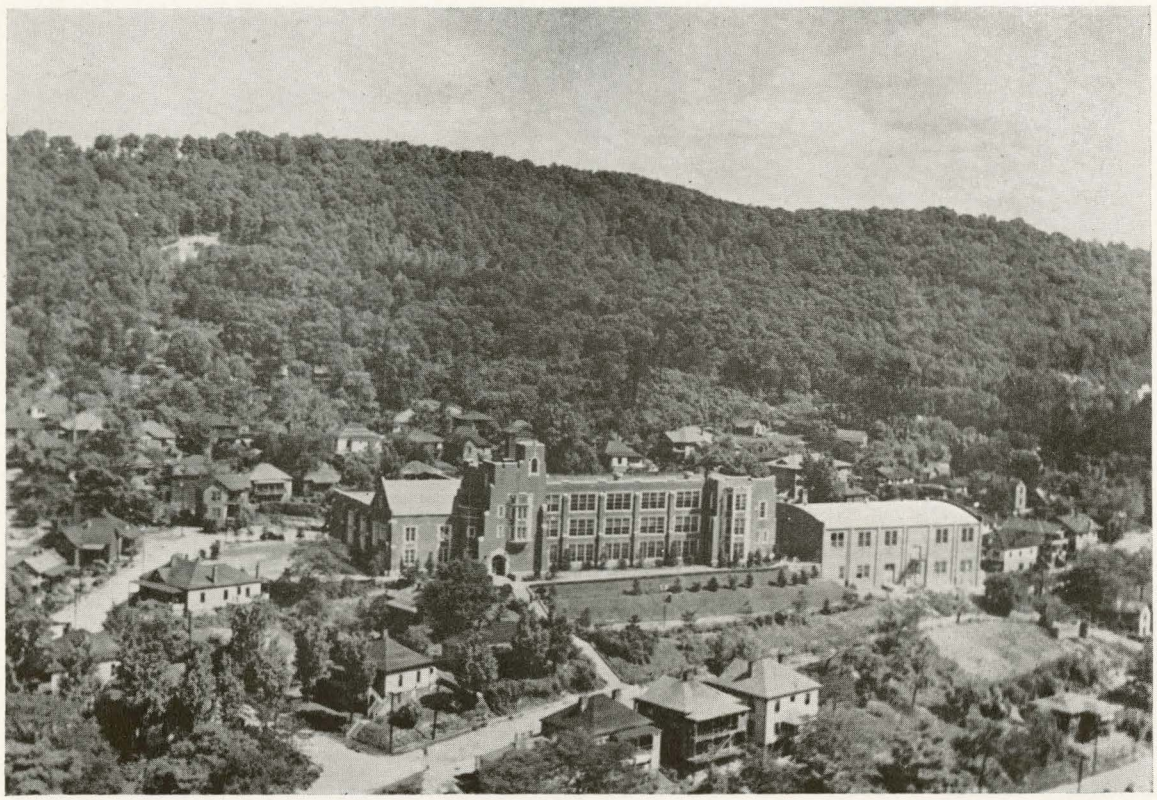
The Arts

The world of make believe is much more amusing than the world of reality

We Set Our Faces Towards the Mountains

"O, Sing a New Song"

Let our Song be Heard!

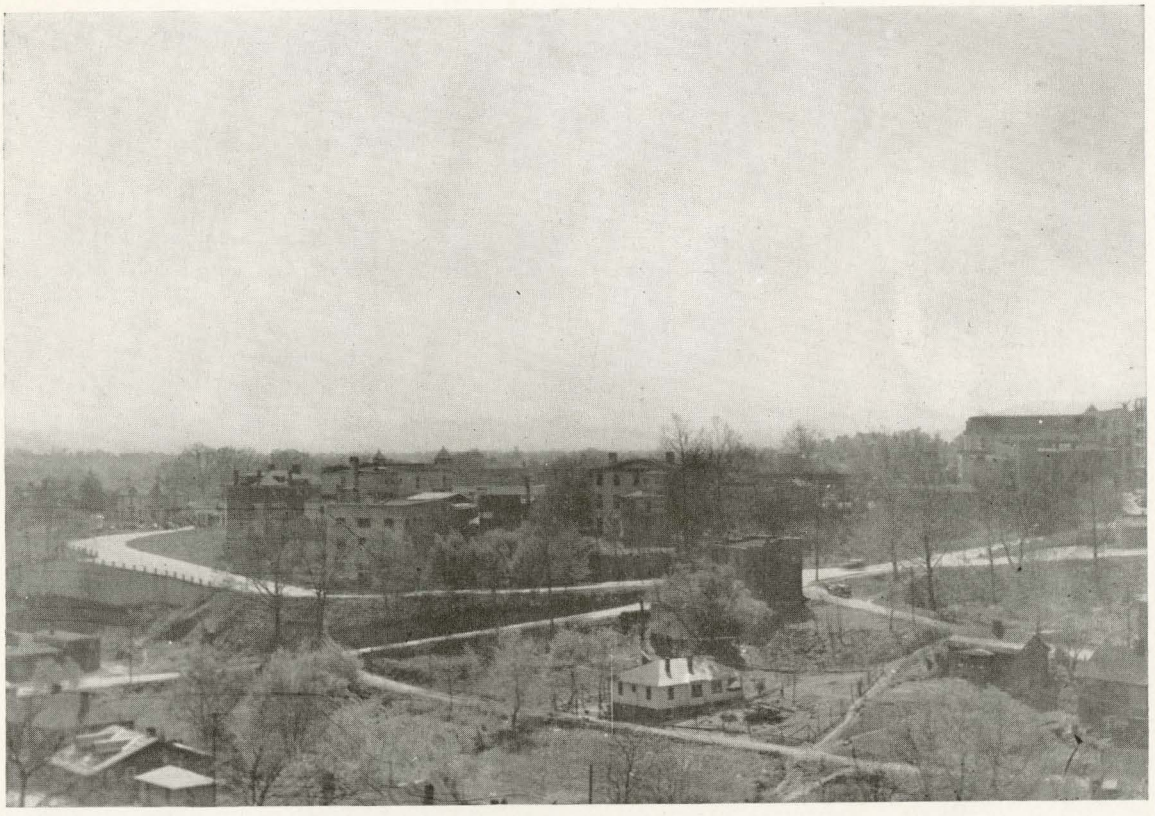


Looking Eastward

On looking east, my eyes drop to the very ground about the school:
A basement jutting out into the yard—coarse beauty,
Plots of grass here and there—a bare bank,
A long stone wall resembles the one of China;
But the mountains are a beauty to behold.
In truth, the foothills are a thorp,
And the mountains are a city within a city,
With its troubles and its people;
Reproducing, destroying, loving, playing,
And making music 'till the cool of the evening.
The houses front to back are stair steps to the peak
Wherein the needled pines reach upward toward the Sky.

Developing Poise and Grace

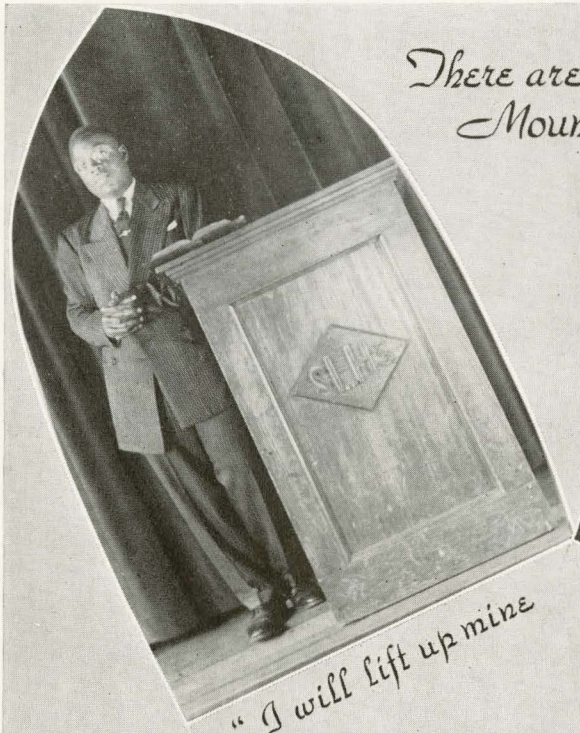
An important factor in school life and community



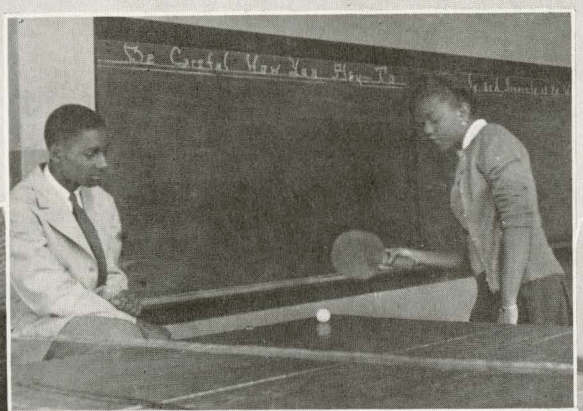
Looking Westward

Like a shrine forever speaking, stands this school in all its splendor.
In tune to the Star Spangled Banner, waves a huge flag to and fro.
Covered with green grass are its rippling terraces;
Too tired to move are the evergreens;
Like dancing girls are the shrubs;
Like children playing a merry game are the trees;
Like a house whose furniture is out of order is the valley below,
With its doll-like people making their daily rounds;
Walling them in are the mountains above.
These things we see, as we turn our faces toward the West.

There are so many Mountains

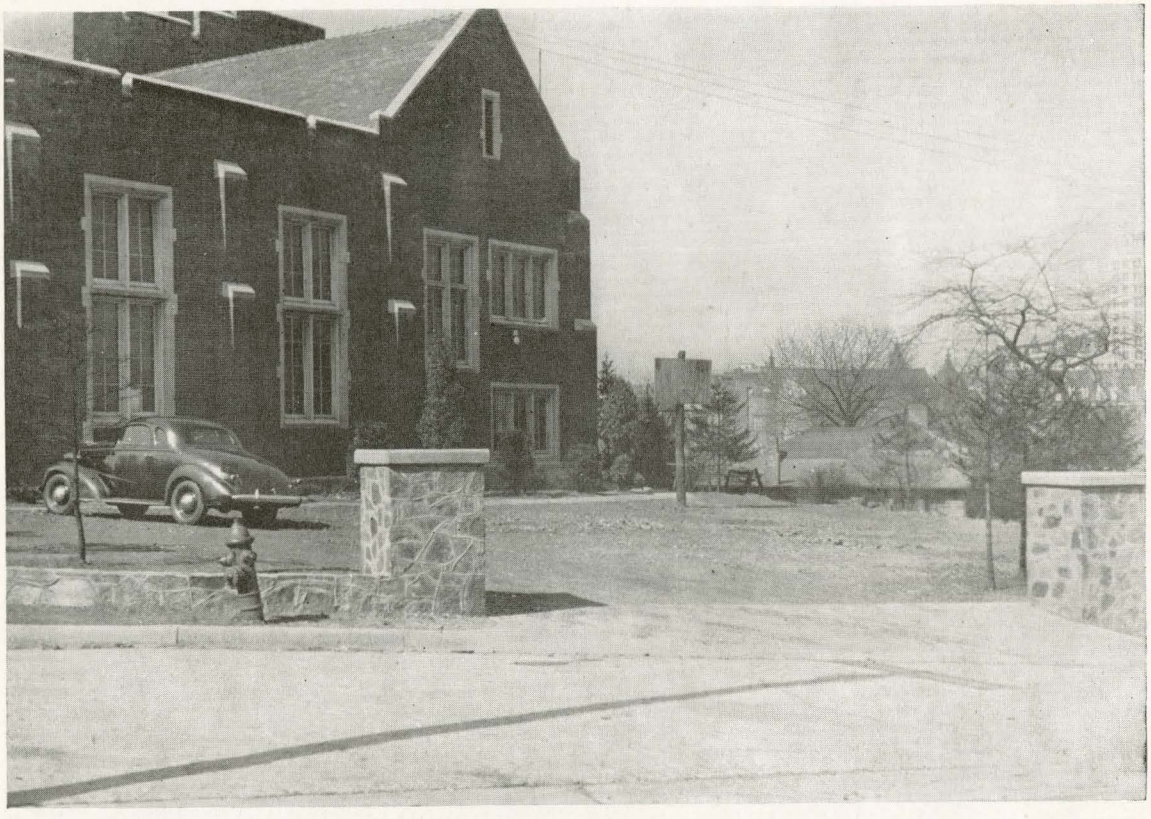


"I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills



observing

The things I see unto the mountain"



Looking Northward

Like the sunset in the evening, red rays shining on green earth;
Like guards watching shrubbery, two pillars at the entrance stand;
Like shelter for ant people, lies a brick walk for protection;
Like barren fields sparcely cropped, are the signs of trampling feet;
Like a handwoven rug, the trees are, covering the sloping and rising mountains:
Like the waves of the sea are the mountains, when the tide is coming in:
These things we see, as we turn our faces toward the North.

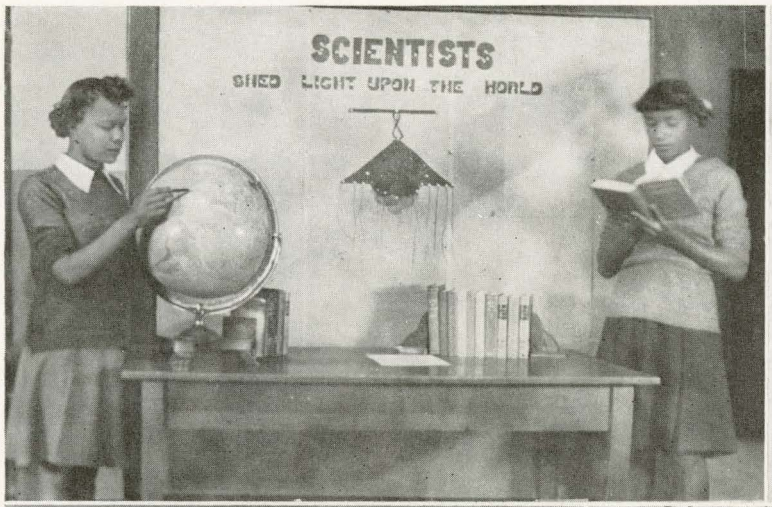
To soar above the mountain

To look at from time to time

Lest we appear ill-groomed

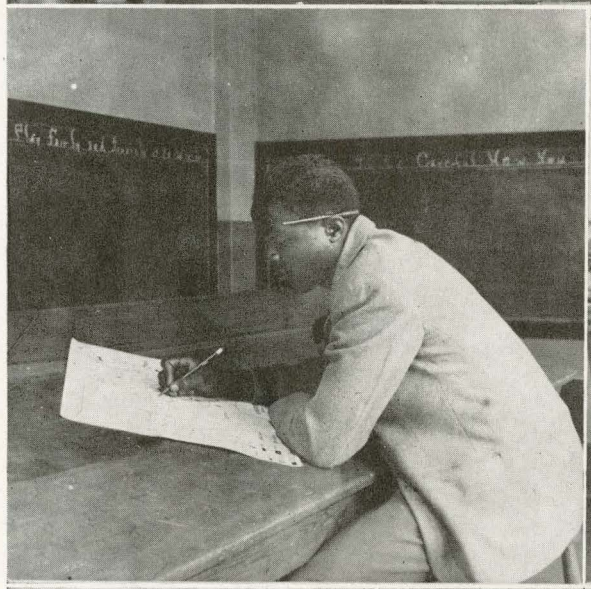
Looking Southward

A Knight's castle atop a hill brings days of chivalry.
Mountains like sentries in the night, vigilant—watchful
In rain, snow, and fair weather they continue to stand;
Houses cling to them for support,
Traffic and modern machines ever searching,
Circle them like waves against the shore;
The mountains climb ever toward the sky.
The verse ends—the scene is complete,
And the darkness descends; As we keep our faces ever toward the South.



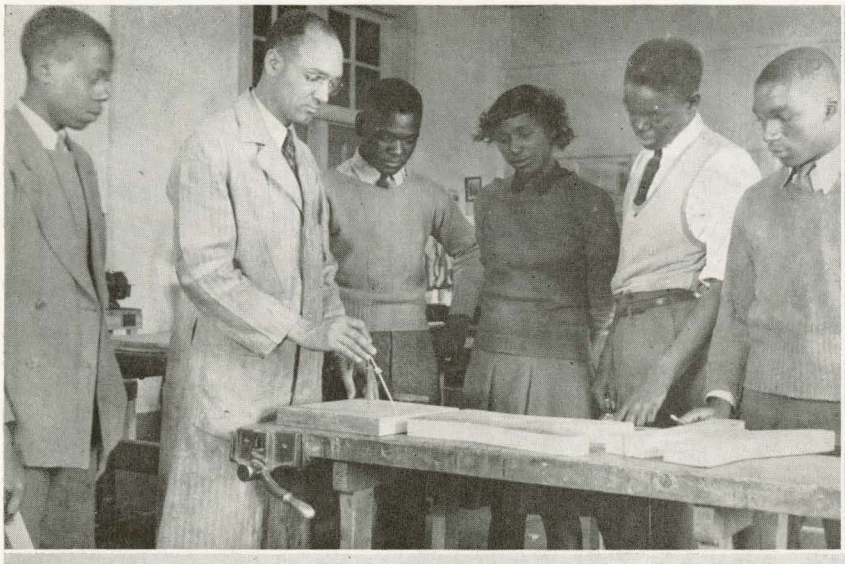
Reading is an inspiration

Words are stepping-stones to good expression



Printing is like a great Music Harp, it has so many tones

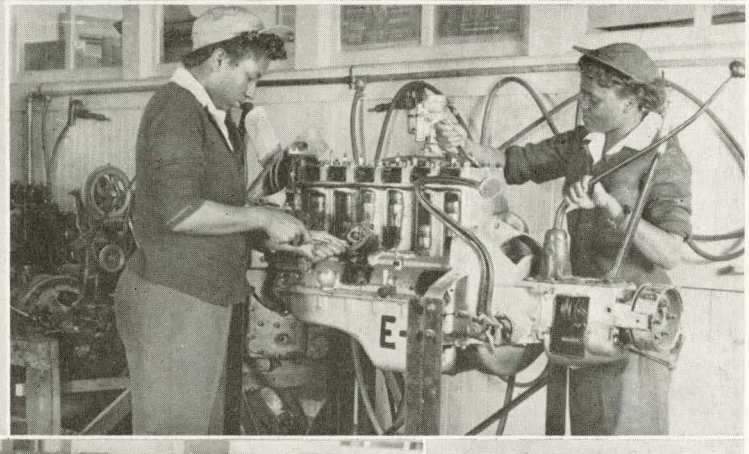
Conversation is an art



Tools of the mind

Industrial Arts

One tube missing



Learning the parts

Today we work,
tomorrow we rest
with our knowledge
still working

The hum of the machines is music to my ears

Domestic Arts

How the fingers fly

Balancing the diet

Success lies in our two hands - we must train them

Commercial Science

Paving a way for better positions in the business world

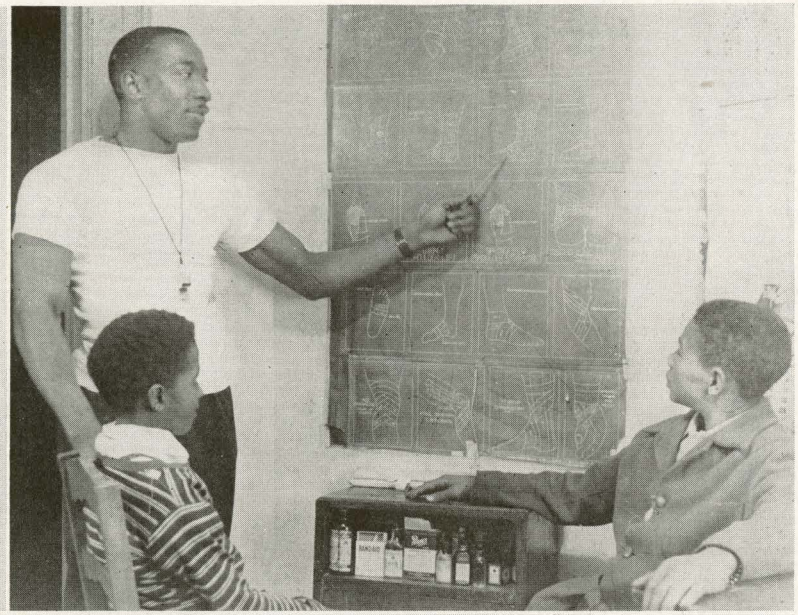
Receiving and recording

To help our race tomorrow we must know past and present progress

Academic Interest

A key to people and their customs

Physical Education



Developing a clean mind,
a good spirit and a healthy body

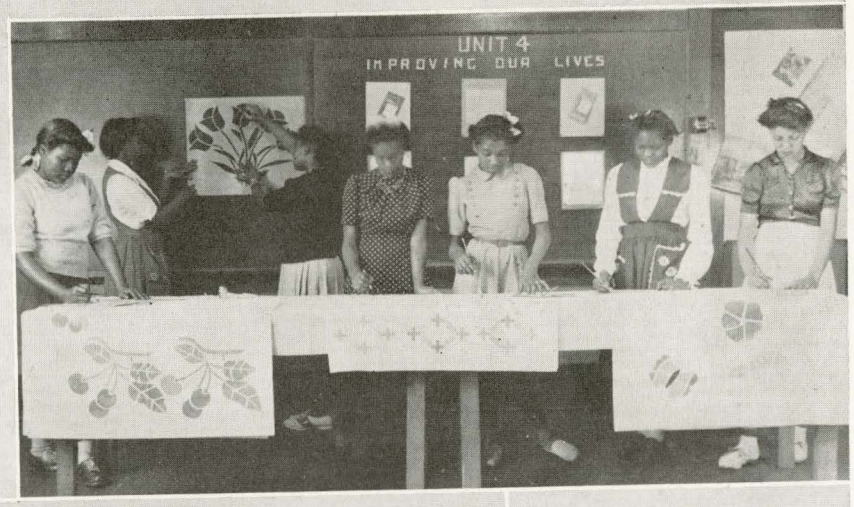
Junior Class

Halfway up the Mountain

Freshman Class

At the Foothills



Sports

Have you ever seen
a man play basketball -
A woman at a table
playing bridge?
That's what we're like.
For all of living life
is just a game,
And when we lose or
win,
We are ourselves
right then!
